Volunteering Ireland, the National Volunteer Development Agency, is a peak body for all organisations involving volunteers in their work. We are a representative voice for volunteering in Ireland advancing the interests of volunteers and volunteer involving organisations, and we passionately believe volunteers can change the world for the better. We work to inspire, promote, support and celebrate volunteering in all its forms.

vision

Our vision is for Ireland to be a country that brings alive the principles of active citizenship, enables participation and empowers everyone to be involved in all aspects of Irish society through voluntary activity in the neighbourhood, community and world we live in.

aims

- To celebrate volunteering and promote active citizenship.
- To support organisations developing skills in order to make volunteering a fulfilling and rewarding experience for both the organisations and the volunteers.
- To inspire volunteers to get involved and make the best contribution that they can.

if your organisation agrees with these statements...

Volunteers can change the world for the better.
Good practice makes volunteering work better.
Volunteering is a powerful way of being an active citizen.
Volunteers should be recognised and celebrated.
